

HONOR DUE

The Citizen Warrior Series, Book I

In HONOR DUE, first of the Citizen Warrior Series, the Major is an ex-Special Forces 'Nam Vet who worked covertly until by the 90's, diabetic and bone-tired of the life, knowing his handlers weren't taking terrorism seriously, he walked away into the Pacific Northwest and lost himself.

As a young SpecOps shark puts him in the crosshairs, the Major is forced to resume hunting in the old way. Then he finds his old Montagnard War Brother, tortured and killed, and his friend's daughter hiding in his forest. The Major's new mission is to unearth what happened 35 years ago, as South Vietnam was falling, that has triggered the current pursuit, and take the vengeance owed his fallen brother and family. Along the way, healing comes, romance blooms and the old warrior finds life is still worth living.

HONOR DUE speaks for the soul of our citizen warriors, appealing to readers of both genders interested in the way soldiers view the world.

Without glamorizing violence, HONOR DUE offers insights into the warrior's code, and the necessity of a sharp fang.

“D. H. BROWN has written a pulse-pounding story with a strong unique voice, an unforgettable character, and a mesmerizingly clever plot.”

David H. Dun

National Bestselling Author of Necessary Evil and The Black Silent

“A tense thriller painted on a dark palette, suffused with the heavy, cedary incense of the rugged northwest forests. D. H. BROWN's tight plotting and vivid characters continued to haunt me long after I had closed the book.”

Michael Curtis Ford

National Bestselling Author of The Ten Thousand and The Sword Of Attila
